Wine of Cardui Cured Her.

213 South Prior Street,
ATLANTA, GA., March 21, 1903.

I suffered for four months with extreme nervousness and lassitude. I had a sinking feeling in my stomach which no medicine seemed to relieve, and losing my appetite I became weak and lost my vitality. In three weeks I lost fourteen pounds of flesh and felt that I must find speedy relief to regain my health. Having heard Wine of Cardui praised by several of my friends, I sent for a bottle and was certainly very pleased with the results. Within three days my appetite returned and my stomach troubled me no more. I could digest my food without difficulty and the nervousness gradually diminished. Nature performed her functions without difficulty and I am once more a happy and well woman.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents. All druggists sell the 50c. size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N.Y.

The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.

With Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh and Hay Fever.

BEFORE THE HALLOWEEN FIRE....

By Ruby Douglas

Copyright, 1904, by Ruby Douglas

"Isn't this quite the most fun we've had?" asked Pauline, laying the last chestnut on the hearth and resuming her seat on the low stool before the fire.

"Quite," replied the man beside her.

Pauline looked up. "You're so serious, Teddy. You're always so serious that I feel I should almost call you Theodore, not Teddy."

He smiled indulgently at her. What a child she was in spite of her twenty years! He had known her always, for he was about to be forty.

"Don't, I beg of you. Look, child, my chestnuts are going to pop first."

Pauline framed her face in her hands and rested her elbows on her knees, intently watching the chestnuts open wider and wider.

"Don't forget the names, Teddy. I'd like to know which girl is to have you."

He smiled again. He always smiled at Pauline. He watched the firelight twostep through her ringlets and about the great coil of hair wound gracefully about her pretty head.

"Oh, Teddy," she cried, and dismay was the predominant emotion betrayed in her tone. "They all popped at once." And it was true. All three of the man's chestnuts had popped simultaneously, leaving Pauline without the satisfaction of knowing whom the Halloween fairies had destined for her companion's wife.

The man laughed. "Watch your own. That fat one on this end seems ready to jump."

Pauline, a shadow of disappointment still on her face, studied her chestnuts. "I can venture a guess as to who that end man is, little girl."

"Can you?" she asked saucily.

"Yes, and he seems to know he is to pop first. He is a confident chap, at least."

Pauline ignored his remarks. The first chestnut was ready to burst, and the middle nut looked ready to follow any minute, but the one on the other

"I'M AFRAID YOU AREN'T GOING TO PROPOSE AT ALL."

end was opening slowly. A frown dodged into the space between Pauline's eyes. What did Halloween fairies know about it anyway?"

She moved her stool back and slipped to her knees on the hearth, bending closely over the chestnuts.

"Pop! Of course you would pop first," she scolded, talking to the innocent chestnut that had just found its proximity to the flames too trying.

The man sat back and watched the expressions come and go on her face.

"And you are not glad that one popped first?" he asked. "I fancy I could name him."

"It was he—George Bidwell—but I don't intend to marry him," she retorted, with determination.

The man raised his brows quizzically. It was what he had come to accept as inevitable, that Pauline, his dear little friend, would marry this boy. Certainly it would not be the young man's fault if she did not.

"You silly chestnut," Pauline began, talking obviously to the nut on the far end. "Why are you so slow when you know you should have popped first?" She did not turn her face toward the man, but kept her eyes on the nuts.

And the man supposed it was the heat from the flames which heightened the color in her cheeks. How pretty she looked! He had never realized before how lovely Pauline really was.

Pop! The middle nut had jumped away. Only one remained.

"That was John Carrington," confessed Pauline, looking up shyly into the face above hers. "Now, wouldn't you like to know who this third slow one is?"

"I would, indeed, but he seems to have little chance."

"Perhaps it is his own fault. He has been lying there so indifferently, hardly seeming to realize that he was near the fire and not seeming to care to jump and pop like all the others." Pauline was again leaning over the last chestnut, talking half to its inanimate shell, half to herself and not at all to the man now sitting up straight in the chair behind her.

"Aren't you going to tell me who it is?" he asked.

"No," she retorted over her shoulder. Silently they both watched the chestnut. It was opening slowly, very slowly, but surely, and the deep yellow heart was beginning to show through the cracks.

"You're a silly chestnut," said Pauline, shaking her head at it; "you are so slow. You deliberately let all the others get ahead of you." She paused while the flames danced about merrily, trying to urge the nut on to jump.

All unconsciously the man was bending closer to the girl, trying not to lose any of the conversation which was not addressed to him. Somehow it was an interesting soliloquy. Usually he let Pauline ramble on and on, unmindful of her chattering, treating her almost as a child—a dear, lovable child. Now he had an unaccountable curiosity to know for whom she had named the last chestnut. There were so many young men whom she might have chosen.

"You—you think you are old," Pauline was saying still to the chestnut, "but you aren't at all. And you are so serious, and you fancy your hair is gray." Her tone was very low—confidentially low—and she bent more closely over the nut.

"I'm afraid you aren't going to propose at all. I'm beginning to think you will never understand that—that you love me, you funny chestnut," she laughed nervously. The nut was on the verge of jumping, and she was perilously close to it.

"Be careful, dear," said the man. "It might strike your face." And Pauline thought he had never spoken to her so tenderly.

She lowered her eyes quickly. "Oh, chestnut, you are—you are going to pop! You are!"

Pop! The slow nut had jumped, and Pauline excitedly reached out for it and caught it.

"Oh!" she cried, dropping it.

The man slipped to the stool beside her. "Why did you do that, child? You've burned yourself," he said, taking her hand in his.

For a moment he held it silently, looking into its pretty pink palm.

"Pauline, who was the last man—the man who hurts you?"

She looked up into his eyes.

"Dearest, can it be? Oh, Pauline, and to think I have never realized until tonight what you are to me!" Her head dropped to his knee.

"You—you almost made me propose to you, Teddy," she mumbled from her refuge. "And if it had not been for Halloween you would never have jumped."

"We'll make up for it by getting married next week."

And that was why the forward chestnut and the deliberate chestnut were allowed to remain side by side until they turned black and crisp.

A Short Recitation.

My parents, well meaning in their way, taught me solemn things about "O man immortal, live for something!" and all such, and I had to humiliate myself by disgorging them in public. The consequence was that not only on Friday afternoon, but whenever anybody came to visit the school, I was butchered to make a Roman holiday. But there is one happy memory of a Friday afternoon. Determined to show my friends and fellow citizens that I, too, was born in Arcadia and was a living, human boy, I announced to teacher, "I got another piece."

"Oh, have you?" said she, sure of an extra-O-man-immortal intellectual treat. "Let us hear it, by all means."

Whereupon I marched up to the platform and declaimed that deathless lyric:

When I was a boy, I was a bold one.
My mammy made me a new shirt out o' dad's old one.

All of it? Certainly. Isn't that enough? That was the only distinctly popular platform effort I ever made. I am proud of it now. I was proud of it then. But the news of my triumph was coldly received at home.—Eugene Wood in McClure's.

Did Dickens Use This Story?

On one occasion, when Dickens and James Payn were "swapping" stories, relates James MacArthur in Harper's Weekly, Payn told the following curious incident to the author of "David Copperfield:" Payn, it seems, was returning to his home one summer night through a fashionable street near Piccadilly when a sudden thunderstorm caused him to take refuge under a portico which commanded a view of one of the fashionable houses across the street. As he stood looking into the lighted drawing room a lady dressed in a ball gown appeared at one of the open bow windows, and at the same moment a man who looked like a beggar ran across the street and stood under the window. The lady threw out to him her bouquet. He caught it and, nodding twice to the figure above him, ran off at full speed.

Dickens was greatly interested in this story, and the question is asked whether he ever made use of the incident in any of his novels.

A Complimentary Contradiction.

A New York publisher has a reputation for employing the homeliest stenographers and typewriters in the city. Efficiency rather than beauty is what he wants, and he knows the prettiest ones are not the most efficient. Just the same, it is said of him that he doesn't know a pretty woman when he sees one. Still his wife is an unusually handsome woman.

Not long ago she came into his office, where she appears only at rare intervals and only when it is absolutely necessary. She was met by an office boy, a bright Irish lad, who had never seen her. She asked for Mr. Blank.

"Who shall I say wants to see him, mem?" he inquired.

"His wife," she replied.

He looked at her in open eyed surprise and genuine admiration.

"Sure, mem, I'll tell him," he said, starting off, "and bad cess to thim thar says he has no taste in ladies, mem."—New York Times.

DOGS AND DEER.

A Mad Flight For Life In the Wilds of Siberia.

The strength of heredity both in wild and in domesticated animals is brought into clear light by an incident related in a book, "In Search of a Siberian Klondike." The authors of the book were traveling by dog team through the wilds of Siberia.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the dogs suddenly broke into a swift run, and we knew they had scented something that interested them. We soon perceived that we had struck a deer trail and that we were nearing an encampment. We turned a bend in the road, and there a hundred yards ahead of us we saw the cause of the dogs' excitement.

A team of reindeer were running for their lives. Their Tungus driver was lashing them with the whip and was urging them with all his might, for he knew as well as we that if our dogs overtook them before the camp was reached we seven men would be utterly powerless to prevent the dogs from tearing the deer to pieces. Our driver put on the brake with all his might, but it had not the least effect. The fourteen dogs had become wolves in the turn of a hand, and no brake could stop them. There were many stumps and other obstructions along our way, and my driver had great difficulty in preventing a smashup.

For a short time the deer held their own and, in fact, gained on us, but before the yurta (village) came in sight we were gaining rapidly. While we were still at some distance the people of the village, warned by the cries of the dogs, comprehended what was the matter and, arming themselves with sticks and spears, came running toward us. As they came on they spread out in a fanlike formation across the trail. When the terrified deer reached the line the men spread out and let the team through and instantly closed again to dispute the passage of our dogs.

Our driver was nowise minded to let the natives club his dogs and perhaps injure the valuable animals, so he resorted to the last expedient. Giving a shout of warning to me, he suddenly by a deft motion turned our sledge completely over, landing me in a snowdrift on my head. In this position the sledge was all brake, and the dogs were forced to stop. They were leaping in their harness and yelling like fiends incarnate.

I sat up in the snow bank and laughed. The other drivers had followed our example, and the struggling tangle of sledges, harness, dogs and men formed a scene that, to the novice at least, was highly ludicrous. The drivers and the village people were belaboring the dogs, and the entire herd of reindeer belonging to the village was escaping in all directions up the hills.

The reader may well ask how the natives can use both dogs and reindeer if the sight of a deer has such a maddening effect on the dogs. The explanation is simple. The two never go together. There is the dog country and the deer country, but they do not overlap. Confusion is often unavoidably caused by traveling with dogs through a deer country, but the natives do not take it in ill part, knowing that if they themselves have to travel with deer through a dog country they will cause quite as much inconvenience.

Fishing.

THE trout season opens today and there has been much preparation among local fishermen who will be found whipping the trout streams in this vicinity from now on :

SAY boys, get busy,
For you're in God's country now
The fishing season opens soon
What fun we'll have, oh wow!
If I am just a small, small boy,
I guess I can fish some.
Oh say, I just could hardly wait,
For Saturday to come.
I've rubbered into every pool
And say I've seen some trout.
You needn't think I'm going to tell
Just where they are about.
Because I'll get up there myself
Before you fellows do,
And well I guess that I can fish,
I know I'll hook a few.
Oh gee its fun to get a pole
And start out in the morn.
I tell you, boys, on Saturdays
I'm glad that I am born.
On Saturday there is no school,
I'd rather get fish hooks
Caught right hard in my fingers
Than to study them old books.
And now the season's opening up,
I'm happy as a clam
You fellows needn't grin and laugh
Because, well sure I am.
I'm going to start a-digging bait
And ask ma for a lunch
And Saturday morn I will start off
The first of all the bunch.
I'm going to practice telling lies
It's right against ma's wish
But some how I don't think it's wrong
To lie about a fish.
Why every one tells whoppers here
About their fishing gee,
I tell you now if lying counts
You can't keep up with me.
So I'll be fixed with lies and bait,
Oh say, boys, I can hardly wait.

Should the Newspapers Portray Life as It Is?

THE newspapers' chronicle of the day's happenings in the world gives us a glimpse of life as it is and of the views of the editor as to the judgment of his readers,

The average metropolitan newspaper of today records a score of crimes and catastrophes daily. News seems to be selected with the idea of furnishing the public with the terrible things which transpire in life. In a Tuesday morning paper these were some of the news topics: "Clara Hulbert Committs Suicide," "Stole Millions But Lacks Bail," "Woman Reveals Stage Robbers," "Mrs. Chadwick Gets Ten Years," "Cut To Pieces by a Train," "Drowned While Canoeing," "Murdered Then Robbed," "Cut Three Boys With a Knife," "Jealousy Leads to a Bloody Crime," and many other subjects no less morbid.

It is true that all these things happen in life. Crime is rampant and passion as unbridled as it ever was, but why accentuate these things in the newspaper. It is really the fault of people that they get such reading for there would not be a supply of this kind of news if the demand did not warrant it,

However, one cannot help but deplore the fact that so many of the little pleasantries of life are unheard of while the brutal and heart-rending happenings are flaunted to the public eye.

Every individual has his own troubles but every one has not the joys of life and if we can get a little reflection of someone else's pleasure it would be far better than the dark shadows of big calamities.

True there are some catastrophes where we must and should sympathize but the ordinary offense would be better unpublished. Too often the weak-minded misplace pity and sympathy where it is not deserving. In some cases great criminals are the object of hero worship and some young boys are foolish enough to try and emulate them.

The newspaper has to deal with a mighty problem when it seeks to be the recorder of life and yet please those who would wish that life seem better than it really is,

Most of our modern journals take human nature as it exists and caters to it. In that way they make money.

One would have to sacrifice finances to ideals to publish the right kind of a newspaper.

The experiment of a man like Mr. Carnegie along these lines would undoubtedly prove of interest,

Grand Jury Report.

Following are some of the recommendation and findings made by the Grand Jury in its report on Saturday last: "We recommend an amendment to the ordinance governing so-called road-houses. Applicants should be compelled to give a bond for $500 to keep a lawful, quiet, orderly and reputable place and the signatures of at least eight out of the twelve nearest residents should be required before granting applications for licenses."

"Regarding liquor licenses the amount of the licenses should be identical with the amount of expense caused the county through the conducting of the liquor business."

"We commend the action of the Board of Supervisors in appropriating $800 during the past year toward advertising the resources of Imperial Sonoma. Judicious advertising produces results of a direct benefit to every citizen and taxpayer.

"We would advise that the County Jail be altered to comply with the law in relation to juveniles. We recommend placing an elevator in the Court House to be run by electric power and a new, modern, brick Hospital, with heating plant also a modern Pest House. A competetent architect should be employed to examine the county buildings and report on their condition."

"We have made a careful examination of the affairs of the various officials and find that they have conscientiously performed their duties.

AGRICULTURAL FARM FOR SONOMA VALLEY

L. L. Lewis' Ranch is Being Talked of For University Experimental Work.

The L. L. Lewis ranch, on the old Carriger place, is being talked of as an admirable site for the new University Agricultural Farm, for which the State legislature, appropriated $150,000 at the recent session. It is a grand piece of property, abounding in natural springs and fitted for tilling and dairying purposes.

So enthusiastic are some of the promoters of this idea that Luther Burris has interested I. W. Hellman of San Francisco, a regent of the university, in the the matter and Luther Burbank has also been induced to use his influence toward securing the farm for Sonoma Valley. It looks as if we have a magnificent chance to get the Agricultural Farm. It is even whispered that perhaps A. W. Foster, who is also a university regent, has purchased the Fair ranch for this purpose.

If the Fair ranch property is not to be the site of the farm, the Lewis property should be. The property includes 800 acres and part of it is in citrus fruits, which is easily raised owing to the fact that the farm is outside of the frost section.

Splendid railway facilities are near at hand and everything combines to make this place an ideal one for the Agricultural Farm.

The Rudolph Spreckels farm and the Mrs. Hearst vineyards are but a short distance from the property.

The gentlemen who have the naming of the site for the farm are Governor Pardee, Lieutenant Governor Anderson, Elwood Cooper, Ben F. Rush and President Wheeler and they should not forget that Sonoma was one of the first localities chosen by the Mission Fathers for their selection of the garden spots of California.

The Rose Sartor Estate.

In the Superior Court on Wednesday the petition for partial distribution of the estate of Rose Sartor was filed. Nicholas McDaniel, a resident of Ireland, who claims to be a brother of the deceased, is the petitioner.

Mrs. Sartor, or as she was familiarly known, "Rosie," left an estate consisting of $4,880 in coin, although she was supposed to be compelled to work for her living.

McDaniel asks for one-third of the estate, as there is supposed to be a sister of the deceased in Boston and a niece in Los Angeles.

Death of Mrs. Lewis.

Mrs. Aurelia Lewis (nee Bert) of Placerville, an aunt of Clarence Nauman, died on Monday. Mrs. Lewis spent several weeks here last year at the Henry Bates home while Mrs. Bates was in the hospital and made many friends while in Sonoma.

All Butter Must Have Weight Thereon.

According to the new law, on and after May 19, 1905, all butter must have its weight marked upon it so that purchasers will know just how much butter they are buying. Any violation of this law will be a misdemeanor and upon conviction will be punishable by a fine of from $20 to $100.

The law is for the protection of the butter consumer, who has so often been imposed upon by being sold short weight butter, although paying for a full amount. Butter dealers favor carrying one and two pound squares, each having its weight plainly marked.

Weed Home Scene of Excitement.

The home of Mrs. and Miss Mabel Weed of Berkeley, mother and sister of Benj. Weed formerly of this place, was the scene of great excitement Thursday morning, when an old lady living in the rear of their home, committed suicide and the room she occupied took fire.

The old lady turned on the gas with suicidal intent which was ignited by a candle left burning in the room setting the house on fire while the suicide went to her death.

When the room had been filled with the deadly moxide, there was a terrific explosion and before the fire which followed could be extinguished, the body of the old lady was badly charred.

Mr. Chelini plead guilty to simple assault, which was accepted by the Judge, who after hearing the evidence on both sides fined the defendant twenty-five dollars.

District Attorney Pond and Frank Sprague prosecuted while Chelini was defended by Clarence Lee of Santa Rosa.

County Surveyor Smyth is at work surveying the county road through Dr. O'Donnell's place, which will do away with the road up the steep hill back of Glen Ellen. This will certainly be a great improvement and a much shorter route.

There was a light fall of snow on the mountain tops around here Wednesday morning. The snow remained on the ground until 8 o'clock Thursday morning. The contrast of the green trees and the mantle of white snow was a beautiful sight to behold. It is needless to add that the prevailing colors were green and white.

THE BOND ISSUE WINS A VICTORY

Carrying of Bond Election in Santa Rosa Should Show us What to Do

The carrying of the bond election in Santa Rosa Tuesday is indicative of the spirit of the progressive residents of our sister city, who voted to expend $72,250 for water; $72,250 for a sewer system; $90,500 for other needed improvements. The future of Santa Rosa is assured.

The victory for the bond issue there should show Sonoma what to do in order to get the improvements we want here.

The people of Santa Rosa looked at the street proposition in this way. "There are 10,000 people in Santa Rosa. This means that the proposed expenditures for streets will cost $5 apiece—and we have forty years to pay it in."

The voters there realized that the bond proposition is the only feasible one for a community that would be progressive. They showed at Tuesday's election their faith in those who first advocated the bond cause by voting nearly $240,000 for improvements that way.

A Card Party Surprise.

Mrs. Susie T. Enos was tendered a surprise card party Thursday evening. The affair was planned by a number of friends who had been the guest of Mrs. Enos at a series of card parties inaugurated by her this season.

Mrs. Enos was taken completely by surprise and a cordial welcome was extended to the unexpected merrymakers.

High five was played and twelve players participated. After the card playing was over a delicious repast was served. There were toasts given and an original verse dedicated to the club members and Mrs. Enos.

Averted A Runaway.

Joe Ryan narrowly averted a runaway Wednesday evening through his presence of mind. While driving the bus out to El Verano from the postoffice the kingbolt broke, causing the pole of the bus to strike the horses. The animals became frightened and started to run away, but Ryan, with rare presence of mind, steered them into the livery stable where they came to a standstill. Two ladies, who were passengers in the conveyance, were badly frightened by the experience.

SECRETIVE ANIMALS.

There Are Several That Have the Food Hiding Instinct.

I have sometimes seen a dog bury in the ground a bone for which he did not seem to have any present need. I have always understood that he did this on the principle which actuates a provident man to lay up something "for a rainy day." This may be, though I have never known a dog to dig up the bone afterward, yet some persons tell me they have known him to do this. I should think the dog must be hard pressed by famine that would attempt to gnaw a bone covered with clay and dirt, as this bone must be after being buried in the ground. If the dog hides it away through any such provident forethought as this it must be the slightest remnant, a mere adumbration, of a former instinct of his race. He does not pursue this practice in the steady, methodical way in which an ant or a bee or a squirrel lays up a stock of food against a time of need. With him it is only a fitful and rare occurrence. His long domestication and the ages through which he has received his food from the hand of his master have obliterated largely the sense of this necessity from his mind, if he may be supposed to have a mind.

The fox when he has had the good fortune to capture several fowls at the same time will, it is said, secrete such as he has no present need for under a bush or behind a log. I remember that in Rowland Robinson's pleasant book, "Sam Lovel's Boy," a young fox is represented as doing this. "He began burying the leg of a lamb in the loose earth, but desisted when he saw the eyes of all his mates were upon him, then unearthed the half buried treasure and sought a new hiding place." I do not understand that the wolf had this food hiding instinct. Gilbert White of Selborne says in his quaint way that he had "some acquaintance with a tame brown owl" which when full hid, like a dog, what he could not eat.

"The origin of most of our domestic animals," says Darwin, "will probably forever remain vague. But I may here state," he continues, "that, looking to the domestic dogs of the whole world, I have after a laborious collection of all known facts come to the conclusion that several wild species of canidae have been tamed and that their blood in some cases mingled together flows in the veins of our domestic breeds." He mentions a dog whose great-grandfather was a wolf, and this dog still betrayed its wild ancestry in the fact that it never approached its master in a straight line when called. But which species of the canidae from which the dog may have descended has the food hiding instinct or habit I have nowhere seen stated.—Forest and Stream.

Not an Odious Comparison.

The head clerk had been invited to an afternoon wedding and in order to save time appeared at the office in the morning fully "groomed" for the ceremony. As he threw aside his overcoat he was disclosed in all the majesty of a swagger frock coat of the latest cut, gray trousers fashionably creased, patent leather shoes and white puff tie.

His position in the office made him immune from comments by the underlings, who, however, regarded him with serio comic admiration and longed to say what they felt.

But the barrier was broken a few minutes after the day's business had begun and by a friend who dropped in for a moment's chat. He was somewhat lacking in dignity, for which the clerks blessed him.

"Good morning, George," he said cheerily to the head clerk. Then as he took a second glance at the sartorial "dream" he added; "Great Scott! What's up? You look like a certified check."

And even the head clerk joined in the general burst of laughter.—New York Press.

Animals In Art.

"Sheep are in strong demand in the picture market," said the manager of a department store art gallery. "If I were a painter of animal studies I would confine my work entirely to pictures of sheep. They sell better than any other animal pictures. I suppose the reason is that sheep lend themselves to more artistic poses than other quadruped subjects. They can be more effectively grouped, and the contour of their bodies is in soft and rounded lines well adapted to artistic work. Then sentiment is a factor in the popularity of these pictures. The women and children always are attracted by them, especially by pictures of sheep lost in a storm, which appeal to their sympathies. Cows are a poor second to sheep in popularity, and the demand for horses is very light. The horse is a somewhat conventional subject and one very difficult to portray artistically, while the sheep can be easily and effectively introduced into a picture."—Philadelphia Record.

Punch and Judy Came From China.

Punch and Judy dates back to about 1,000 years before Christ.

When the Emperor Mu of the Chou dynasty was making a tour through the empire a skilled mechanic named Yen Shih was brought into his presence to entertain him and the ladies of his court. Yen Shih had some automatic figures which not only were capable of dancing, but of accompanying their movements with song.

During the performance the puppets cast such significant glances toward the ladies that the emperor became angry and ordered the execution of the originator of the play. The mechanic ripped open the puppets and proved to his astonished majesty that they were artificial. Instead of being executed Yen Shih was allowed to repeat the performance, which corresponds to Punch and Judy in England and America.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ROSE TO THE OCCASION.

The Way a Financier's Clerk Extemporized a Cipher.

When Wall street first caught the fever for "industrial combinations" and began the reorganization of everything in sight, says the Brooklyn Eagle, one of the votaries of high finance found himself in Chicago in extreme need of communicating with his New York office.

He had almost completed an arrangement for the consolidation of several western enterprises, but in order to get the final authority he needed from New York he must explain all he had done by wire to his partners.

There was no time to write. He had no cipher code. For a long time he tried to think out some way to send the information so that it would be plain to his partners and meaningless to any one else. His secret was a valuable one and once sent over the wire might be sold out to his rivals in Wall street for a large sum.

At last he decided to take the chances in plain English. Accordingly he wrote the message and gave it to his assistant to send.

Half an hour later, when the assistant came back, he asked him if he had sent it.

"Not just that way," said the clerk. "I rewrote it—the first word on a Postal blank, the second on a Western Union, and so on. I sent half by each company, and neither half meant anything. Then I sent a second message by one line, saying, 'Read both messages together, alternating words.'"

The scheme was too simple for the high financier to have evolved, but it worked perfectly.

AN ODD WHIST HAND.

It Looks Like a Sure Winner, but Can Take Only Six Tricks.

To any one familiar with whist the following hand is bound to look pretty good:

Hearts.—Ace, king, queen, jack, ten and nine.

Diamonds.—Ace, king and queen.

Spades.—Ace and king.

Clubs.—King and jack.

Hearts are trumps.

It looks like a good thing for eleven tricks sure and possibly for twelve. Should any whist player of experience get such a hand, however, he will be mighty apt to be as suspicious as the poker player who is dealt four kings. It is what is known as a "yarborough" in whist circles, and this is the denouement: The dealer holds the other seven hearts (trumps) and six small clubs to the ten. The dealer's partner holds the ace and queen of clubs and one small club. What his other ten cards are makes no difference.

The partner of the person holding the good hand holds the thirteen other cards, and it makes no difference what they are. The "good" hand has the lead, and if any whist player wishes to verify the assertion he may try from now until doomsday and yet not be able to take more than six tricks with the hand. It is impossible by good, bad or indifferent play to take a single trick more, provided, of course, the dealer and his partner play their hands properly.—Baltimore Sun.

Annual Whipping Days.

Canterbury school in England had an annual whipping day, when, as Green tells us, an all round whipping was given to the boys not for any definite fault on their part, but with a view to their general improvement. Canterbury was not singular in the belief that a sound birching now and then was in itself a good thing for boys. The idea was commonly held in the old scholastic world and was regularly acted upon by the most famous head masters, from Dean Colet to Dr. Keate. Erasmus says he was flogged on this principle, and Charles Lamb found it to be the practice at Christ's hospital.

A Village Fiasco.

Gifted Amateur (concluding pet card trick)—Now, ladies and gentlemen, you have seen the pack of cards burned before your eyes and the ashes placed inside the box, which mysteriously transformed itself into a rabbit, which in turn disappeared into space. I will now ask this gentleman to name the card he selected, when it will at once appear in my hand. Now, sir, what card did you select from the pack? Giles (who has been following the trick most intently)—Blessed if I recollect!—Punch.

One Exception.

President Luther of Trinity college, at Hartford, Conn., preached one Sunday when he was a professor in college on the story of Esther. He concluded with the words, "'So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai,' and every one was pleased." Then as the irony appealed to him he added in a lower voice, "Except Haman."

Clever.

"Don't be so lazy. There's plenty of room at the top, and you're clever enough to get there."

"But," replied the lazy genius, "think how clever it is of men to find a place at the bottom where there isn't so much room."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Chances the Woman Must Take.

A man is like a piece of cloth warranted to wash, and matrimony is the laundry. It may improve him, give starch and freshen him up, or it may take all the color out of him.—New York Press.

Anxious Moments.

Brother—You can't think how nervous I was when I proposed. Sister—You can't think how nervous she was until you did.—Town and Country.

The original sin to which all human beings are liable is the sin of idleness. —Rev. S. Pearson.

Deserted Their Towns.

So late as the end of the seventeenth century the inhabitants of Ceylon were in the habit of deserting their towns. Their customs are described in the narrative of Captain Robert Knox, who for nineteen years—from 1660 to 1679—was a captive among them. He speaks of several towns as lying desolate owing to the fact that their inhabitants had forsaken them. This they did if many of them fell sick and two or three died soon after one another, thinking that it was a visitation of the evil one. Some of them came back when they thought the evil spirits had departed.

Snowdrifts In Sweden.

The worst snowdrifts experienced by any railroad are said to be those in Sweden. Although the cold is not so intense as in some of our western states, the snowfall is heavy and continuous. The snowplows of various kinds which are used on these roads are said to be the most powerful in the world. There are times, however, when even this machinery fails to clear the way, when hundreds of men must be employed to dig out the stalled trains.

Rather Cynical.

Deacon Jones—What do you think of the proposition that women remove their hats at church? Rev. Mr. Wyse—Think of it? Why, it is the most absurd thing I ever heard of! What do they think the women come to church for, anyway?—Detroit Transcript.

The Tender Scene.

Perdita—Well, Jack and I are to be married at last, and we are so happy. Penelope—Did you and Jack have much trouble in getting your father's consent? Perdita—No; but pa and I had an awful lot of trouble getting Jack's consent.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best and Most Popular

"Mothers buy it for croupy children, railroad men buy it for severe coughs and elderly people buy it for la grippe," say Moore Bros, Eldon, Iowa. "We sell more of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy than any other kind. It seems to have taken the lead over several other good brands." There is no question but this medicine is the best that can be procured for coughs and colds, whether it be a child or an adult that is afflicted. It always cures and cures quickly. Sold by Shoults & Co.

There is a demand for carpenters in this city.

About Rheumatism

There are few diseases that inflict more torture than rheumatism and there is probably no disease for which such a varied and useless lot of remedies have been suggested. To say that it can be cured is, therefore, a bold statement to make, but Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which enjoys an extensive sale, has met with great success in the treatment of this disease. One application of Pain Balm will relieve the pain, and hundreds of sufferers have testified to permanent cures by its use. Why suffer when Pain Balm affords such quick relief and costs but a trifle? For sale by Shoults & Co.

Eggs are retailing in Sonoma from 15c to 20c per dozen.

Rheumatic Pains Quickly Relieved.

The excruciating pains characteristic of rheumatism and sciatica are quickly relieved by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The great pain relieving power of the liniment has been the surprise and delight of thousand of sufferers. The quick relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by Shoults & Co.

The Board of City Trustees meet next Wednesday, April 5th.

The Very Best Remedy for Bowel Troubles—No Family Can Afford to be Without It.

"I regard Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as one of the very best remedies for bowel troubles," says Mr. W. J. Hanlon, editor of the Dispatch, Cedia, Georgia. "I make this statement after having used the medicine in my family for several years. I am never without it." No family can afford to be without a bottle of this remedy in the house. It is certain to be needed sooner or later. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Jules Verne, the great novelist is dead.

Cures Coughs and Colds.

Mrs. C. Peterson, 625 Lake st., Topeka, Kansas, says; "Of all cough remedies Ballard's Horehound Syrup is my favorite. It has done and will do all that is claimed for it—to speedily cure all coughs and colds—and it is so sweet and pleasant to the taste. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Ex-Congressman Theo. A. Bell will leave Napa and will engage in the practice of law in Sacramento.

A Dandy for Burns.

Dr. Bergin, Pana, Ill., writes: "I have used Ballard's Snow Liniment; always recommend it to my friends, as I am confident there is no better made. 'It is a dandy for burns.' Those who live on farms are especially liable to many accidental cuts, burns, bruises, which heal rapidly when Ballard's Snow Liniment is applied. It should always be kept in the house for cases of emergency." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Health is Youth.

Herbine, taken every morning before breakfast, will keep you in robust health and fit you to ward off disease. It cures constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, fever skin, liver and kidney complaints. It purifies the blood and clears the complexion. Mrs. D. W. Smith, Whitney, Texas, writes April 3, 1902: "I have used Herebine and find it the best medicine for constipation and liver troubles. It does all you claim for it. I can highly recommend it. 50c. Sold by L. S. Simmons.
